

new mexico mobility economic resilience & substance use disorder workshop series

Discuss mobility and economic resilience resources and opportunities with transportation, health services, aging services, housing, employment, and economic development professionals at two virtual workshops.

April 20, 1 – 3 p.m. MDT

Substance Use Disorder and Rural Transportation Opportunities

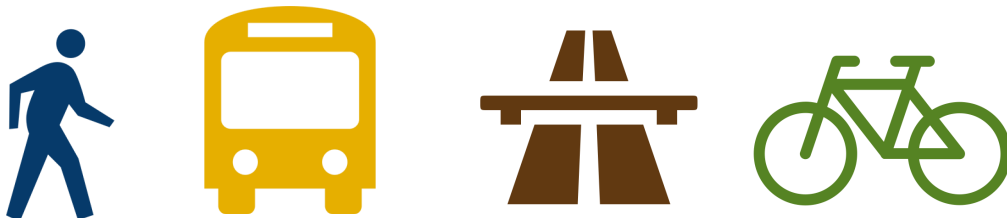

Learn about federal resources for rural areas, existing transportation services, and innovative ideas for vehicle-based transportation, active transportation, and new forms of rural mobility.

May 6, 1 – 3 p.m. MDT

Supporting Recovery and Economic Resilience

Learn more about recovery for individuals with substance use disorders through physical and mental health services and generation-specific programs, and join breakout sessions on topics such as service coordination, employment, and housing.

Learn more and register at ruraltransportation.org/nm-workshops.

The New Mexico workshop series is hosted through a partnership of the North Central New Mexico Economic Development District, the National Association of Development Organizations Research Foundation, Western Transportation Institute, and the National Rural Transit Assistance Program. Funding support has been provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Over 65 percent of New Mexico residents living with substance use disorder are not participating in treatment.

Difficulty obtaining transportation is a top reason why treatment appointments are cancelled.

Source: NM Department of Health, Substance Use Disorder Treatment Gap Analysis, January 2020 \(2018 data\)